We shot several sets of photos with her - I've included a good selection of my favorites from her first session here, but there are some even more explicit shots, and videos awaiting at LSG.

During our recent foray into Normandy with the LSG crew, I had the chance to shoot a couple of the Czech fashion models stripping down to their lovely skin out behind the chateau.

We tried to find a Morticia Adams dress for this session.

If you review the full set of images, you may notice that she's sitting or standing in a simple white closet, purchased at the nearby Ikea store.

It was very cramped and hot, but we managed to come away with what I think are some really great images.

My session with Mia and Nikita, however, is an exception.

I'm posting about half of the shots here, but LSG will have the full group, including an even more explicit series, for anyone who wants more.

They've been great to work with, and the site looks like it will be "gangbusters" as they say in the UK.

She's a classic beauty, and was great to work with - and she's certainly not shy

She has that classic young Scandinavian look - ivory skin, pure blond hair, and the sweetest smile north of Bangkok.

Or am I just speaking for myself.

She's a star on several of the top glamour sites, and I've wanted to shoot her ever since I first saw one of her sets on Met-art.

Somehow we managed to make it work out.

This series comes from my first trip to Prague last year.

This is another LSG session from our recent trip to Prague, so there are some rather explicit shots at the end of this set.

I've left in a number of shots one might normally reject - awkward stances, funny expressions - since I believe, in this case, those things add to the eroticism of the series.

I know some people will view this set of images and say "pornography"; others will see the same photos and say "Art"; and still others will say "how did you focus your camera like that?"

Charlie's a fashion model in various locations in Europe, and will be featured next month on LSGmodels.

As some of you have commented, these sessions I've shot in Prague and London are becoming quite sexual.

In this one, she squirms around quite a bit, trying to get out of that red teddy, but will she succeed.

" I'll assume you can decide the "art vs porn" issues for yourselves, so let's talk about selective focus.

That's when I really get to spend time with the images, and in a sense with the models as well.

I enjoyed the shoot, of course, but in fact I get more of an opportunity to really look at her as I edit the image files - and of course you now have that same opportunity.

I shot several studio sessions with Heather, using some great lingerie from her personal collection.

We tried to find a Morticia Adams dress for this session.

This site contains nudity, and should be viewed only by those interested in bold artistic representations of the naked human body.

Yashin is a Czech fashion model who works a lot in Prague and has appeared in their version of "Cosmo".

If you're like me, this is what you'd really like to see when you flip through Vogue or Elle.

Today's update is from her return trip, when we spent the whole afternoon together.

As you'll notice, I couldn't stop with just one sequence, so I asked them to do it several times.

Heather was recommended to me by Ken Marcus, who has featured her on his own site a number of times.

Even the little pink flowers on her tummy appear to have been there since birth.

Of course you'll still need to find a woman as great looking as Simi to get in your closet and take off her clothes.

The summer heat was very intense, especially in the upper attic bedroom we were using for this shoot.

Sara is what I would call "handsome", in the same vein as Salma Hayek or a young Sophia Loren.

" I'll assume you can decide the "art vs porn" issues for yourselves, so let's talk about selective focus.

In reviewing images for these projects, I've had to do some re-scanning and enlarging of work that has been previously shown here in the Archive - so I thought you might like to see the results.

These are some of my favorites after another week's worth of shooting for the London Studio Group.

This set is particularly "bold", due to the nature of the LSG site, but I think you'll see the artsy aspects to the images as well.

I'm posting about half of the shots here, but LSG will have the full group, incl uding an even more explicit series, for anyone who wants more.

As you'll see, she has an impish little smile that says she's having just as much fun as you'll have looking at her.

Let me know if that sounds appealing, and I'll try to include some candid shots in future sessions.

I had a group of models to shoot for the LSG project, and she was one of the beginners - young and not quite sure of herself, but very happy to give it a go.

com, hits the web today with a great selection of both stills and hi-def videos.

Setting it in the center is the standard default, but if you choose one of the sides, and use a wide open f-stop, you'll get that lovely soft and dreamy look throughout the rest of the image.

For those of you interested in the technical details, I used one strobe and basically surrounded her with white curtains and reflectors.

Heather was recommended to me by Ken Marcus, who has featured her on his own site a number of times.

but we didn't really try very hard, since I knew she'd end up like this.

For the photography aficionados, I've included a couple shots that show the studio set-up we used.

In some of the shots, you can see another model, Viki, wearing a winter coat in the background - although I doubt you'll feel cold looking at most of these images.

In some cases I remove or neutralize the warm tone, but in Layla's case I thought it added to her rather golden look, so I kept the adjustments to a minimum.

but here's another picture-perfect European fashion model quite happily posing in her birthday suit.

I wish I'd taken a few snaps of her when she first walked into the studio, wearing just generic jeans and a t-shirt, with no makeup.

This series of Bente was done just a few weeks ago.

As you'll see, she has an impish little smile that says she's having just as much fun as you'll have looking at her.

I know they'll have a few movies of some of the recent models shown here on MoreyStudio, since I saw the film crews hard at work in Prague, and they plan to add new stuff every day.

There was barely enough room for me, my camera, the two girls and a bottle of lo tion.

I love this simple lighting set-up.

Thanks for your patience.

This is a technique I love to use, and I practiced it extensively in this session.

Thanks for your patience.

And although this is Viki's fourth appearance here, these are actually from the very first time I shot her, last year in Prague.

She insisted it was correct, and I have to admit I lost all interest in spelling and paperwork, once she lifted her skirt.

Even the little pink flowers on her tummy appear to have been there since birth.

There are a couple dozen of my favorites in today's update.

As for her name, well I have no idea, except she did say her father was from Egypt.

As you'll notice, I couldn't stop with just one sequence, so I asked them to do it several times.
